POLITICAL NOTES.

—The Democratic Deputy City Treasrer of Brooklyn, who robbed the city of $203,000 has not been arrested. "He knows too much," it is said, and he is therefore left alone. Those who have shared his stealing and dread exposure have sufficient power to prevent his arrest.

—Governor Hendricks, of Indiana refuses to take part in the Ohio campaign, because he regards the platform erected by the Democracy as a fraud and cheat, which professes what no true Democrat believes, and promises what the party will never fulfill if granted power.

—The New York Liberals, it seems interpret the action of the Wilkesbarre Convention as notice to them that the Democratic party has dissolved its connection with them. John Cochrane is very mad about it, and vows all sorts of revenge, of course; but the great public consoles itself with the reflection that when rogues fall out honest men are sure to get their dues.

—The editor of the Knoxville (Iowa) Democrat thus jokes over the condition of the peeled and scattered party of the State;

"There is not enough left of the old banner under which we have been fighting for years, to patch the seat of the trowsers of a Court House rat. We are scattered; and in the race through the brush the devil will not only get the hindmost, but may gobble the whole lot. Which will be a good joke on the devil!"

—A ghost, in the central part of this State, has alarmed those who were conscious of its presence, by leaving, in the soft clay in which they were standing, the distinct impression of a gigantic human foot. The foot was not visible but the impression of it was clear and unmistakable. At least so they say; and they are at their wits end to account for it. Perhaps it was the ghost of the Democratic party making tracks.

—"Isn't it a little curious that the Pennsylvania Democrats used for their State platform this year the identical resolutions already adopted by the Ohio Democrats, with the exception of that clause which insists that "our tariff should be formed with a view to revenue, and not to tax the community for the benefit of particulur industries"?—Troy Times.

Not at all. The true reason of the Pennsylvania departure from copy was probably not so much that the platform makers did not agree with their Ohio brethern, as that they lacked the pluck to avow it. They had not the courage of their opinions—that is all; hence—

"Letting I dare not upon I would,
Like the poor cat i' the adage."

—The State of Virginia has twenty-six millions of acres of land, much of it good and all of it available for some purpose, with labor in abundance and farm animals in ample supply. And yet her public obligations sell in the markets for little more those of Greese, Spain, and other governments which are admitted failures. This is cheifly owing to the enormous debt which the Democratic party in that State has fastened around the necks of the people since it came into power four years ago. Virginia is one of those States lately cited by the Post as an illustration of the remarkable prosperity which characterizes the Democratic Commonwealths of the Southern portion of the Union.

—Remarking on the progress of the Ohio campaign, the New York Tribune bitterly bemoans the disagreeable fact that "both wings of the opposition have opened the campaign badly"—the nominee of the succotash party by his assault on the "Liberals of last year, and the Democratic candidate by buncombe appeals to the soldiers, and anti diluvian discussions concerning State rights and theories of representation. Yet, "badly" as the opponents of the Republicans have begun the fight, they will be sure to end it in an infinitely worse manner. Then, how will the Tribune feel—Meanwhile, if that paper is not too busily engaged in nursing its grief, we should be glad to have its opinion of the manner in which the Democracy of Pennsylvania "opened the campaign." What does it think of the Wilksbarre platform's pusillanimous avoidance of the tariff question, for instance?

The nomination of Jno. Irwin, Jr., of Centre county imposes upon the Republican party of the district an active, working campaign. The District can now be carried and a Republican Senator elected. All that is wanted is harmony and work. The signs are auspicious. We have the assurances of the Republicans of Huntingdon county that they will give the entire party support to the senatorial nominee and from all parts of the district great satisfaction is expressed with Mr. Irwin's nomination. The Democracy who were expecting thr ough our dissensions to carry the district without an exertion, find themselves unable to make a nomination and divided and demoralized they are now defeated. They cannot give Mr. Meek a unanamous nomination. Whoever receives it may expect the secret opposition of the defeated candidates. We call upon every Republican in the District to go to work and elect our Senator. We can carry our nominee in every county in the district if we do our duty. Huntingdon County is ours by a good Republican majority. Mifflin county can be claimed for Mr. Irwin. In the present demoralized condition of the democracy in Juniata, we stand a fair chance of carrying it. Centre must and will give Mr. Irwin a majority. To the Republicans of Huntingdon we say give us your party majority and we will increase it in Centre, and make the would-be Democratic district forever Republican.

In order to build up the farming interests of the county now so depressed we must change or modify the existing state of getting farm products into the hands of the consumer. The present system of conducting the produce trade as carried on by large combinations of capital, has a tendency to drive our young men from the fields of agriculture and honest labor, and thus cripple in a greater or less degree all other productive industries. Middle men in many instances charge unreasonable profits for handling which causes producer and consumer both to suffer, both must work hard and remain poor or get into the Legislature and steal. It is well known that a year or two ago Bellefonte could quietly boast of its "grain ring" or "grain corner" with Major Wm. F. Reynolds as its chief manipulator. The object of the combination was to keep down the price of grain, to have no competition in the buying. Reynolds in order to keep the price of grain below market rates, made the prices, and the buyers bought for him, he paying them 2 or 3 cts. per bushel commission. Prices were so low in Bellefonte that farmers in Pennsvalley sought other markets, in fact those in the immediate vicinity of Bellefonte hauled their grain to Milroy and Flemington. This not only curtailed the business of grain buyers but all other branches of business. Bellefonte lost trade, for wherever farmers found a market for their grain at a fair price there was where they were inclined to buy their supplies. It is fresh in the minds of every business man in town, that last winter the farmers of Brush and Penns valleys found a better market for grain in Bellefonte than they found elsewhere, the result of which was that during the time the grain was being delivered, all branches of business prospered better than at any other time during the winter. The crops in many parts, last season were a failure, but this year there is an abundant crop housed. By reason of there being a short crop last year many farmers are compelled to thrash early and sell their crops. Wheat is only quoted at $1.20 per bushel in Bellefonte which is too low. It looks as if that same old grain ring is in existance, if it is, the other branches of business should combine against the present buyers and put up grain to its full market value and show the farmers of Centre county that "Justice shall be done though the Heavens should fall." Flour is being sold at as high prices now as when wheat was $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel. If flour is worth $8.00 per barrel, the price that it is selling at, wheat is worth $1,50 per bushel, although it is only quoted at $1.20.

—The August report of the State Sinking Fund Commissioners has just been published. The amount of debt reduction for that month was five hundred and seventy-four thousand seven hundred and forty-five dollars and nine-four cents. A pretty solid and effective Republican argument, as the honest and economic tax-payers of the State will be apt to think.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE — ANNUAL MEETING.

The Eighteenth annual election of Trustees for the Agricultural College of Penna. took place at the College on Wednsday the 3rd inst. Most of the delegates arrived in Bellefonte on Tuesday evening and were conveyed to the College in cariages by our citizens. As they arrived at the College Dr. Calder was in waiting, who invited the delegates to proceed to visit the farm and outer buildings before dinner. The invitation was accepted and a thorough examination of the College and the Central experimental farms was made. At 12 o'clock M. the delegates and visitors were invited to dinner who ate heartily and were well pleased with the wholesome repast. After dinner the delegates and visitors were invited to the Laboratory where Prof. Collier entertained them by making a number of experiments with electricity which were highly entertaining and instructive to his audience.

At 2 o'clock the Convention met. J. R. Eby was chosen President and T. J. Bigham and A. S. Hallman Secretaries. The following delegates presented their credentials.

Lycoming Co.—Wm. Starr.

Northumberland Co.—Joseph Bird, Jno. McFarland, J. Nicely.

Penna. State Agricultural Society—A. Boyd Hamilton, J. R. Eby, of Dauphin County. John Murdock, Allegheny Co., and Wm. Holstein, Montgomery Co.

James A. Beaver, Daniel Kane, and Francis Jordon, were elected trustees for the ensuing three years. By request of A. B. Hamilton, Dr. Calder, President of the College, addressed the meeting at length. He proposed that the delegates would look around and examine the institution and surroundings for themselves. He felt that it was a State institution, about which they had nothing to conceal and would refer the delegates and visitors to the annual Catalogue for published details. During the past year they have progressed very pleasantly. They have eighty five students present and more will be present next week, and they have hopes of increasing the number to one hundred and fifty this year. He stated that there were only three Colleges in the State which surpasses them in the number of students. He held that their discipline was attended with good results that the students were composed of excellent young men who were trying to do their duty.

At the outset the College had fallen into many difficulties, two of which was, that they tried to get along without the aid of the Lord and without women, that he never knew a man or institution that could get along without either (applause). They now have religious services regularly every Sunday, and prayer meeting held during the week but no sectarian doctrines are promulgated. The admission of ladies to the institution have made a marked improvement in the male students, for they now feel better, dress better, and behave better, athough they are in separate departments except the dining room, and are only allowed to communicate with each other by permission of the President and approval of Preceptress. In the matter of debt the College is laboring under the same old difficulty. At the outstart the College made a funded debt of 80,000 dollars and a flouting debt of 40,000 dollars, before a student had been admitted. They were now compelled to pay out 2,800 dollars semi-annually interest on the funded debt, making 5,600 dollars annually 2,000 dollars each to the experemental farms making 6,000 dollars annually and from 10,000 to 12,000 dollars annually to Professers, which nearly consumes the entire income of the proceeds from the sale of Government Land scrip which is 30,000 dollars per year. The floating debt in addition to above is attended with the greatest difficulties for they are compelled to keep it alive through the banks. Only one bank would furnish them money at six per cent while there are plenty that will take 12 per cent. This rapid absorption of the annual income requires them to be in debt on account of current expenses which is quite a drawback in the purchase of supplies for, if they could pay as they go, they could buy cheaper and to a much better advantag e for the institution. Students are charged 20 dollars each for the supply of fuel and to keep their room clean which is the net cost to the College. (There is no charge for tuition), all other charges being as near net cost as they can be made. To enable the College to succeed, it must be relieved from debt, and not being a sectarian institution, there is no religious denomination to look to for aid, we must therefore call upon the capitalist of the state for subscriptions or ask the Legislature for an appropriation, and this meeting ought to express an opinion as to the proper course to pursue in regard to the finances. One of the principal features of the College is the connection of labor with study. Each student is required to work on an average of ten hours per week, working four hours at a time and among the best students are those who are supporting themselves. No change should be made in the general direction of the institution.

The act of Congress provides that the appropriation shall go to the maintenance of the College faculty and they must teach Agriculture, mechanic arts (and military tactics). In addition to working on the farm many of the students take their turn in carpenter and black smith shops on the farm. Some of the young men who are persuing the agricultural course propose to be Druggists, Doctors, Ministers, Lawyers, Farmers, &c. If the mechanic arts should be added to comply with the Act, more teachers will be required or the students, work on the farm would have to be ignored for the same teacher could not hear recitations enough to enable his class to do their share of farm work. Dr. Calder then desired the delegates to ask any questions they might think of.

Mr. Bigham.—Is the 4000 dollars debt connected with experimental farms?

Dr. Calder.—We have to appropriate 6000 dollars to the experimental farms annually, which keeps us back from liquidating the floating debt.

Mr. Bigham would sell the Eestern and Western experimental farms.

Mr. Murdock thought they might be made self sustaining in a short time, and thought it the height of folly to continue to spend all the proceeds of the farms and 2000 dollars more.

Mr. Eby—Some of us do farm in that way. In compliance with the request of Dr. Calder that some expression should be made in regard to the finances, the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the delegates appointed to hold an election for Trustees of the Aricultural College of Pennsylvania, highly approve of the present mode of conducting the affairs of the educational department of the institution, the great improvment in the management of the farm connected with it, the efforts made to increase its productions. And are further of the opinion that it is due to the cause of Education and Progress that the Legislature should come to the relief of the College to remove a debt which arose before any endowment was made in its behalf.

It was suggested that the Legislature be petitioned to pass an act authorizing the sale of the experimental farms, upon which Gen. J. A. Beaver made the following remarks.

When the Legislature passed the act appropriating the proceeds of the sale of the public lands to the College, one of the conditions of that act was, that the College should establish and maintain three experimental farms. As soon as the College accepted the conditions of the act and established the farms it involved a contract which could not be abrogated by the Legislature without the consent of the college. If the Trustees should ask the Legislature to authorize them to sell the experimental farms and the latter should acquiesce, it would annul the contract, and other institutions would apply to the Legislature for a share of the funds. He thought the matter should be well considered before taking such a step.

Hon. T. J. Bigham said this was his second visit to the College, his first visit being many years ago as a member of the Senate. He had heard the whole policy here criticised as being a humbug, but he was now satisfied that the reports were manufactured wilfully and maliciously, without the least knowledge of what is really being done at the College. He would venture to say that there was not fifty men in the whole state outside of those who visit the College who have the least conception of what was being done here, hence the misrepresentations. The system of education in Penna. was not satisfactory to him, especially among Colleges. The new constitution when adopted wil change it, and the whole system will come under a superintendent of public instruction. He thought we had too many Colleges already in Penna. one third of them would be sufficient which should be placed on a high standard at once.

He was sorry to know that three fourths of the graduates of Princeton are Pennsylvanians and he was free to say that those fathers who reside in our state, have been born, raised and grown in wealth and affluence under her protection are not good Pennsylvanians, who send their sons out of Pennsylvania to be educated. If we have not professors in Pennsylvania who are qualified to educate Pennsylvania's sons, he would cut their heads off and get those who are qualified. (Great laughter and applause) He was particularly severe on Yankee Colleges and Yankee institutions generally (for out-striping Pennsylvania in the line of education) and would not have the name of sending his sons beyond the limits of Pennsylvania for an education for he was a Pennsylvanian, every inch of him. He hoped soon to see the day when Pennsylvania will do for herself what Oxford has done for England and what Harvard has done for New England, (applause.)

Debt is a terrible thing especially to Colleges. You must get out of this debt or die. If you were free of debt you could live and prosper for every thing here indicates thrift and prosperity.

Mr. Hunsicker said that when he first came here, he looked upon the College as being a grand humbug, and this was not only his opinion but the opinion of nearly every agricultural man who visited it. He now believes if every farmer in Pennsylvania could come and see for himself what I have seen to-day every one of them would say, give the institution money enough to clear it of debt. Twenty-four hours ago he would have voted against giving the College any more money but now he was ready to go to the Legislature and say free the College of debt, and open the way to give every young man in the state the rudiments of an agricultural education for he held that every boy in the land should be taught the rudiments of agriculture.

He held that agricultural education made boys strong and vigorous who became the great men of the state and nation. All the rudiments have been introduced here, study and work make the man. He had been here but once before, He was now satisfied that the institution had been grossly slandered and felt that when the truth became known, the people will take an interest and make it prosper. So many want to send their sons from home to be educated: but he now felt that as soon as Pennsylvanians shall understand the real situation here, they will fill the College with their sturdy sons to its utmost capacity. The reputation must be made, this is the reason why Princeton succeeds, give this College the reputation that it deserves and it will be a credit to the state and the philanthropic gentleman who contributed so liberally for its establishment. The following resolution was then adopted:

Resolved, That the trustees of the Agricultural College of Penn. are hereby requested to inquire into the expediency of reducing the appropriations to the Experimental Farms.

A. B. Hamilton, said something must be done to stop the increase of the current indebtedness of the College. Mr. Holstein said the Trustees have been entirely too liberal with their appropriations to the Experimental farms.

Mr. Hildrup referred to the fact that the Legislature had made an appropriation of 3000 dollars to defray the expenses for establishing a school in which to teach the mechanic arts. He said that appropriations from the state can only be had to a limited extent and in his judgment this institution has its end in a near future unless the expenses are kept within its means, therefore the only safe way is to economize and liquidate the debt. At this juncture he made a very happy retort in reply to Mr. Bigham, stating that he was a Yankee and came from New England 21 years ago and had resided in Penna. ever since, which he felt made him thrice a Pennsylvanian, notwithstanding he was originally a Yankee. He had his heart and soul interested in the good work of education and especially the mechanic arts, and hoped that a step would soon be taken in the right direction for which he and his friend Mr. Bigham would feel proud. There was so much enthusiasm and applause during Mr. Hildrups remarks that our reporter failed to make a synopsis which will do him jutsice. Mr. Hildrup is Superintendent of the Harrisburg Car Works, and a progressive man every inch of him.

The students of the College, male and female, were present during the meeting and attracted the attention of the visitors who were highly pleased with their appearance and deportment. They entertained the visitors with music after which the meeting adjourned.

It is said and very truthfully too, that there never was at any previous annual meeting of delegates such a universal expression of satisfaction expressed in commendation of the management of the College as there was at this meeting, which is certainly very complimentary to Dr. Calder and his corps of assistants,

STATE NEWS.

—Work on the rolling mill at Williamsport is being pushed forward vigorously.

—Ground will be broken immediately for the proposed new furnace at Tyrone—probably this week.

—The Sunbury and Lewistown Railroad will probably be sold, and there are rumors that the Reading will be among the bidders.

—Clay similar to that used in Germany in the manufacture of so-called meerschaum pipes, has been discovered at Middletown, Delaware county.

—We are pleased to see with what warm unanimity the Republican State ticket is accepted by our Republican contemporaries throughout the State.

—The Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society, will hold its twenty-first annual Exhibition at Erie, this year, on the 30th of September, and 1st, 2nd and 3d days of October.

—The Cambria county Grand Jury found a true bill in the libel case of Joseph S. Strayer against the Campbells of the Johnstown Voice. The case came up for trial yesterday.

—The Pennsylvania Bee Keepers Association will hold its annual session at Erie, Pa., on the 1st, 2d and 3d days of October next, it being the same time the State Fair is held, as provided for in the Constitution of the Association.

—At the meeting of the Iron and Nail Association, in Pittsburgh, last Thursday, it was resolved to make no change in the card rates for iron, at present. The price of nails was reduced thirty-seven and a half cents per keg on all sizes.

—The number of small boys who jump on moving trains at every railroad station is great. The other day a lad twelve years of age was killed at Elmira. As soon as the funeral was over the surviving lads got together and passed resolutions of condolence and sympathy, wrote them on a large piece of brown paper with red chalk, and handed them over to the widowed mother. They treated the subject with great familiarity. A postscript was added, saying: "Our grief might have been greater only for the fact that car platforms are generally crowded, and we know our dear playmate is happy. Dear Charlie, we shall miss thee, but your place on the platform will be filled by another."

—The Altoona Sun, straight-out Democratic, pays the following tribute to Judge Gordon: "An original abolitionist the prospect of a bloody cival war has no terrors for him, provided it ended in the destruction of the 'sum of all villainies.' We speak of this to his credit, for he was always one of your positive men. There was no shuffling, or indirection, or concealment about him. It was the same on the temperance and on all other questions of proposed reform. He was no half-way man, and no sneak, nor the wearer of two faces under one hat. The only question for him to solve was, would the proposition serve a good purpose? If his judgment decided that it would, all he desired was the power to enforce it no matter who said nay."

—Absolute free trade would seem to be the objective point of the Western Democracy—the party in Ohio included; in which conection it is interesting to note that, while the Wilkesbarre Convention did not dare to openly indorse the anti-tariff plank of the Buckeye Bourbons, yet the very first resolution in the declaration of principles adopted by the Convention affirmed that the Democratic party of Pennsylvania believed the platform laid down by the Ohio Convention to be "sound in principle"—thereby virtually, if sneakingly, arraying themselves in the ranks of the opponents of the protective tariff legislation under which our wonderful industrial progress

Poetry.

A LITTLE MAIDEN'S SONG TO HER DOLLY.

Lie down, little Dolly, quite still on my lap,
While I hasten to put on your night gown and cap;
You have been wide awake this whole blessed day—
Long enough, I am sure, for a Dolly to play.

The sun has gone down full two hours ago;
'Tis long past your bed-time, you very well know;
The bright stars are peeping from out the clear skies;
Then go to sleep, Dolly—come, shut your blue eyes.

There! a soft little pillow lies under your head;
Had ever a Dolly a cozier bed?
I will cover you up, so warm and so nice—
Then stop your cries, Dolly, hush! hush! in a trice.

Mamma says the flowers were asleep long ago—
Sweet roses, pure lilies, their heads drooping low;
She says 'tis a lesson for me and for you,
That children and dollies should be asleep too.

Hark! Susan is calling, now out goes the light;
I will tuck you up snugly, then kiss you good night,
'Tis time you were sleeping; for do you not know
That the dear little birds went to bed long ago?

THE HEART UNVEILED.

"'Why leave for home so suddenly?' I inquired; 'are any of the family sick?'

"'Yes, sick of your conduct. A pretty miss you are, truly! I sent you here for an education, that when you were old enough you might not disgrace the gentleman whom I have chosen for your husband; but you are no sooner out of my sight than you are in love with the first miserable puppy who fawns upon you, and licks your hand! Shame on you, Mary! I hoped better things of you. Never let it be said again that you are like your father. If you do not know your place better than this, I will keep you under lock and key until you learn;—do you hear? But get ready, girl, for I am in haste; you would have seen me ere this, if I had been at home when the churl's letter came.'"

"With a bitter and rebellious heart, I packed my clothes and books for a speedy departure. When I was ready I went into the drawing-room, to say good-by to the family with whom I boarded, and my school-mates who boarded with me. My father called for pen and ink, and they were immediately placed upon the table. It is said to be unmannerly to whisper in the presence of company; my father would never do it; but he would speak in a tone of voice that no one present could understand, excepting the person or persons to whom he addressed his remarks. I had learned to converse in the same manner before leaving home. After I had spent a few minutes in conversation with the different members of the family, my father, who was sitting on the opposite side of the room, watching me closely, beckoned me to a seat by his side. He held in his hand a sheet of paper, folded like a letter. He showed me the back of it; it was addressed to Herbert.

"What is that?" said I.

"A letter of dismissal,' he said; 'and you must put your name to it.'

"Must put my name to it?'

"Yes, must. It is time this love-foolery was ended.'

"Let me read it first.'

"Do as I command you, and go to that table and sign your name;—do you hear?' And he gave me a look so dark and threatening, that I trembled lest he should give vent to his pent-up wrath in the presence of my friends, who were all strangers to him.

"Do let me read it,' I said, faintly.

"I swear you shall not! I know what's proper to be written; and I am in haste, and will not dally longer."

"I beg of you to let me know what it contains!' His face was now growing black with suppressed rage, and his eyes seemed to burn like hot coals. He knew his power, and my weakness, but too well; and, with the fore-finger of his right hand pointing to me in a most threatening manner, he said, 'Will you sign it?'

"I now well knew that all the bitterness of his heart would be poured upon me in one moment more, if I longer refused to obey. I took my eyes from his, and looked to see if those who were in the room were noticing us; they were all gazing upon us, with surprise and curiosity depicted upon their countenances. I did not hesitate longer, but went to the table and wrote my name, and handed the letter back to my father. If I had been alone with him, I would not have done it; but, as it was, I had not the courage to do otherwise; would to God that I had! We started for home soon after, and I had not seen Herbert, nor exchanged a word with one of my intimate friends. On our journey home my father reproached me in the most cruel and heartless manner, and told me that I had sent a letter to my lover that would settle the matter, and there would be no further trouble. When he said this I looked him in the face, and saw the evidence of such diabolical cunning, that I grew sick and faint, and should have swooned if I had not made strong efforts to save myself. After a few minutes' reflection, I consoled myself with the thought that I should write so soon that my imprudence would not result in any permanent injury.

"We arrived home the next day, and I immediately penned a brief note to Herbert. He never received it; and, I doubt not, it was intercepted by my father. I never asked him, but I am well aware that he was wicked enough to do it. God forgive him the fatal wrong, and may all who hear my sad story take warning! Let parents beware how they trifle with the holiest affections of the human heart. I did not feel to forgive my father while he lived, nor for many years after he died; but now my feelings are changed, and I freely pardon him, as I hope for mercy from God, and forgiveness, ere I die, from all those whom I have injured.

"I requested Herbert to write as soon as he received my note: but day after day passed away, and I was kept in suspense, and terrible suffering.

"I had been at home some two weeks, when a letter was brought to me by my sister Ellen;—its seal was black. I went to my room, and, with feelings which can be better conceived of than told, I examined the superscription, to learn from whom it came. A glance satisfied me that it was from my dearest friend and companion at school, Amanda Wingate. With my breath suppressed, the pulsation of my heart stilled, with fearful dread and terrible forebodings, I broke the seal, and read but one dreadful sentence, in which all the letters seemed darts of fire, leaping to fasten themselves in my heart. 'Herbert is dead!' I could read no more; my brain reeled, my head swam, my eyes grew dim, and I shrieked in terrible agony, and fell heavily to the floor.

"When I came out of my fainting-fit, my mother and sisters were standing over me, with anxiety and alarm depicted upon their countenances. I was carried to my bed, when I soon recovered perfect consciousness.

"'What a horrid calamity,' I thought, 'had befallen me.' But the reality proved a thousand times greater than I could have imagined it. I loved Herbert so well, that under his gentle and loving influence I should have learned the value of principle, and for his sake loved truth, and by and by loved it for its own sake, and so have escaped the awful doom which, since I lost him, has been mine Words are utterly inadequate to describe the cruel anguish that wrung my heart, as I lay upon my bed, bathing my pillow with tears. What was the world to me now? What were friends, home, pleasures, life? How earnestly I prayed for death to come and deliver me from my woes!

"As soon as I could gain courage I read the remainder of the letter, which only served to add poignancy to my already intense sufferings; you will not be surprised that it should have that effect.

"DEAR MARY: Herbert is dead and buried; he died night before last, and was buried to-day, at three o'clock. O, Mary! how could you write that terrible letter? Were you mad? I cannot realize it, it is so like a dark and troubled dream. I thought you passionately loved him; but when I read that fatal letter, I was bewildered. When Herbert read it, he could scarcely believe his own eyes; but there it was before him, and why should he doubt? Would to God he had doubted! That night, he told me, before he died, was one of fearful agony, in which passion, anger, grief, hatred, revenge, dispair, jealousy, made him their sport, as devils may be supposed to sport with the spirits of the damned! In the morning, so terribly had he changed, that a physician was sent for, and when he came he said the attack had been so sudden, and the progress of the disease so rapid, there was but little hope of his recovery. * * * *

"In his delirium he called wildly for you, and then repreached you for your cruelty. I conversed with him in his lucid moments, but he would talk only of you. He commissioned me to give you his full and free pardon for the injury you had done him. O, Mary! how wildly he loved you, and what a heart you have lost! * * * *

"Did I weep when I read this? No' for I could not weep. Had tears fallen, they should have been tears of fire, like those which burnt into my breast, or tears of blood, such as were falling from my heart!

"You have suffered, and suffered bitterly, Henri, I well know; but you have never known the anguish I experienced then, and you never can know it. With few exceptions, man never loves with such fearful intensity as woman; Herbert was an exception, and that was one reason why I loved him so well.

"I wrote to Amanda, to send me the letter; she complied without delay. You may judge of my surprise when I found that the writing seemed like my own; so much so, that those best acquainted with my hand would have been deceived. I read the superscription when my father held the letter in his hand; but I was so much agitated that I did not notice the character of the writing. I knew at a glance that my sister Ellen had written it; we had, for a number of years, been taught by the same master; and, observing how much our hands were alike, we wrote after the same copies, until no one but ourselves could detect the difference. We frequently wrote articles to puzzle our friends, and had many a hearty laugh at the mistakes they made, when they decided, after a close scrutiny, which of us was the writer. Alas! I did not dream, then, that this innocent deception, which served so well for a pleasant pastime, should rob me of what I held most dear, and be the bane of my life! When at school, Ellen and I often wrote in each other's books, and our teacher did not detect us. She had written the letter to Herbert, and I had signed my name to it. When I subsequently questioned her about it, she said that my father brought it to her, and bade her copy it, which she had done, not knowing who Herbert Bending was, nor what was the object of the letter; she thought it a very strange affair, but she asked no questions, and did as father bade her. But you will wish to see the letter; I want you to see it. Read it, Henri, [read it; and then marvel, if you can, that it drove me mad!

"SIR: As I am about to return home with my father, it is time that the farce should end. You have professed to love me, and no doubt you do; but you must have been a weak thing to suppose that I loved you. Don't call me hard-hearted, now; for when a young man, who is little better that a beggar, presumes to love a gentleman's daughter, it is right that she should teach the puppy his place. You remember the proverb, 'Bought wit is very good, if you do not buy it too dear.' You have paid for what you have bought, in love; bah! so the debt is fully cancelled, and you may consider yourself free.

"Do you marvel that I could have manifested so much love, and possessed none, but, instead thereof, contempt? You are older than I, but, sir, you have less experience. I have seen men, and women too, make love in the drama, and the objects to whom they offered their adoration they dispised. And yet, how well they loved,—how ardently, passionately! The wise see through it all; the fools weep! My dear sir, to which party do you belong? I hope not the latter! O, did I not play well the part of the silly, love-sick maid? And you, sir, acted admirably! From my heart I wish you had been wiser; but you are wiser than you were, or you will be when you get this. O, the blissful moments! Will they never return again? Alas! my charming Herbert, I fear they never will. I know you will feel badly, but it cannot be helped. My husband is already chosen; and knowing my true position in the world, I have not chosen a low churl!

"Good-by, sir, and remember to profit by the lesson I have taught you!

MARY J. FLANDERS.

"This was the parting adieu to the one I loved better than life. How I cursed myself for my fatal imprudence!—but I did not dream, then, that my father could do so foul a thing. The terrible thought now came heavy and crushing upon me, that I was Herbert's murderer! O, horror! I was the assassin of him whom I loved with a devotion that words cannot express. The thought palsied my brain, drove the blood back upon my heart, and made me mad! My mouth was parched with burning heat, my eyes seemed fire, and a tongue of flame was lapping the blood of the murdered affections!

"Why was I ever born?' I cried; 'O, cursed, thrice cursed be the hour! Happiness, peace, joy, light, farewell! Go, spirits of beauty, that have ministered to me so long!—go, I need you not now! Grief, sorrow, remorse, agony, ye shall be my guardian angels! Darkness, your great wings, which are as wide as the universe, they shall shelter me! Love! get ye hence, and never approach me again! Hatred, bitterness, revenge, come to me, and ye shall by my servants,—my loving, faithful, obedient servants! Father, I hate ye! I hate ye as dammed spirits hate devils! O, I could see you suffer agony a thousand-fold greater and more horrid than mine, and laugh,—ay, laugh with joy, wild unutterable joy! Sister, as ye have joined in this plot against me, which has made shipwreck of all my hopes, leaving life a dark and troubled sea, without one gleam of light, without one star to shine upon me, I detest you! Mother! that name once dear!—if ye were in the plot, I repel you from my presence, as I would a poisonous reptile!'

"Thus I raved in my agony, until my voice grew so loud and wild that my mother and sisters rushed to my room with affright. Their presence called me to myself; my looks were such that they regarded me with astonishment. When they asked me what ailed me, I pointed them to the letter; it was a relief to learn that they were not guilty.

"I have said that this letter drove me mad, and it was true; not that I became a maniac, but I was fearfully changed. There was ever a strange feeling in my head and heart, and I was often tempted to put an end to my miserable existence. I was closely watched, lest I should do so. My father's presence was agony to me; but where could I go to escape it? I could neither read, write nor study, nor find consolation in society. Some of the time I was excessively stupid, and again my brain was intensely active. I then realized, for the first time, although I did not profit by it, how much evil a lack of principle may cause, and how much it had wrought out for me. If I had been as faithful to truth and right as Herbert ever was, he never would have believed, for an instant, that that most fiendish letter came from my brain or heart. I had witnessed so much of his devotedness to principle, that, had I received a thousand letters under similar circumstances, I could not have believed that they were really from him. Alas! he had witnessed so much deception in me, that it was not strange he believed me capable of such atrocious conduct.

"He once caught me in a falsehood; and many times have I thought how painful was the expression that lingered upon his manly face. I doubt not but that his declaration of love was delayed, through fear that his happiness would not be safe in my hands. I wonder not that he should have had such thoughts. And there were times—though it gives me pain, even now, to think of them—when I took delight in tormenting him; and I indulged in them the more, because I knew that he was devotedly attached to me. At parties I slighted him, and received marked attentions from others, when I knew that it caused deep agony in his heart. But, even then, I loved him better than life. After his declaration of love I was more careful; but I inflicted slight wounds after that, for no other purpose than to gratify my evil propensities, and to make him feel my power. I knew that he madly loved me; therefore I was not so fearful of losing him as I should otherwise have been, I doubt not he thought of all these things when he read that fatal note. My own wickedness had caused him to believe a lie, and destroyed his life and my happiness.

"Never was the nature of a human being more intensely embittered than was mine by this fatal blow. God knows that I should have been bad enough, at best, but not so wicked as I have been. Under the influence of Herbert, which was every day increasing in strength, my impassioned being would have had its energies directed in a different channel, and I should have been a blessing to myself and to others. But, through the atrocious baseness of my father, and my own lack of truth, Herbert's life was destroyed, and I was left in form a woman, but in heart a devil! Every day was spent in misery, and in sharpenning all my senses, that I might have greater hatred in my heart than I ever could have had of love.

"At last, I was introduced to your father, and told that he was the man selected for my husband. Under other circumstances, it is possible that I might have loved him, though I do not think that we were ever adapted to each other; but, at least, I could have treated him as woman should an honorable man who sues for her hand; but now my first impulse was to reject him, with scorn. The second thought, that he was the cause of all my misery, and I would marry him to make him unhappy. I gave him my hand, while hatred was in my heart. The result was what I prayed for; he was wretched, and my father was ashamed of me. When children were born, I should have loved not only them, but their father; but I fancied he had wrought me a great wrong, and I could not forgive or love. You Henri, resembled him most, and the consequence was I loved you least. If I had studied your father's heart, I should have dearly loved all the children, and treated him well; but I did not know it then. I know that I was not in my right mind, or I should not have been so blind. I supposed he had bargained for me, as one would bargain for a horse; and the thought made me detest him.

"After he died, I became alarmed, at a protracted meeting, as it was called, for my soul's salvation. I supposed your father was lost, and I had no desire to follow him. Your father believed differently from most men, and this I thought enough to prove his eternal ruin. He thought that all souls would finally be purified. That they would suffer here for sin, and suffer hereafter, but ultimately be redeemed.

"Deacon Webber, hearing that I was anxious for my eternal welfare, called upon me often; and, instead of sitting at Jesus' feet, and learning of him, I learned of Deacon Webber,—and you know what a holy woman it made me. After his wife died, he offered his hand in marriage, saying that it might prove the salvation of the whole family, who were living without hope and without God in the world. I did not believe that my children would be benefited; but Deacon Webber was highly honored in the church, and I was about to join it, and, should I become his wife I should receive marked attention. In spite of the remmonstrances of my children, and to my shame and sorrow, I married him. I have found him to be a cruel, vile, lascivious, sordid hypocrite! I now shudder when I am called Mrs. Webber; but I will not complain, for it is meet that I should suffer for the wrong which your father received at my hands.

"A year ago, I was looking over some things that were your father's, and I found his diary. I did not know that he kept one. Curioisty prompted me to read it. I had not gone through many pages before I blistered them with my tears. I learned that the man I had so fearfully injured was a good man, and in marrying me had acted from the purest motives. He loved me when he first saw me, and my father had told him that his love was returned. He waited until I was eighteen, and offered himself in marriage, and was accepted, not doubting but that he had my love. In one of the library drawers you will find the journal. Read it, and you will learn how wretched was his married life. My heart bleeds when I think of it. Many of the pages are stained with the tears which dropped upon them while he penned his burdened thoughts.

"The perusal of those pages caused me renewed suffering, but they did me good. They softened and purified my hard and blackened heart. They dissipated the mists of error, and of madness! Things appeared, O, so different! But, before I found the journal of your father I had been made to see the fearful enormities of my life, and I felt deeply sorrowful for my sins. A sick bed had not been in vain, neither had the cruel treatment of Deacon Webber. I often contrasted his life with that of your father; and thought how kind the latter would have been to me, if I had manifested as much regard for him as I had for the former. The thought of the abuse I had heaped upon him, the injustice with which I had treated you, and that poor little girl, Helen Means, made me very unhappy; but I felt that it was good for me that I should suffer thus, and I prayed my God that he would sanctify these sufferings to my good, and that, through them and his mercy, I might be regenerated.

"Of all the children, I wronged you the most. The reason of this was, because you were so hot-tempered; and because your father always took your part and manifested, I thought, more affection for you than for the other children; and because you so much resembled him. With my changed views and feelings, I know that I love you dearly. I fear that you despise your mother; but still, I want to see you, more than words can tell. I have often thought of writing, but have not had the courage. I dare not hope that you will ever love me; but, when you read this, your hatred will not be increased, and you will pity me. My sands are almost run, and I hope soon to be in a better world. When I am gone, love your brothers and sisters,—be united and happy. Now, my dear boy, receive the parting blessing of your dying mother. In heaven I will meet you, where we shall no more hate, but always love. MARY JANE EATON.

CHAPTER XXII.

HOPES NOT REALIZED.

I read this narrative of wrong and suffering with an interest the most profound. Some parts of it caused tears to start from my eyes, and course rapidly down my cheeks. I was not sorry that she had left me this painful history, for it empowered me, after serious thought, to perceive her character in its true light. As I could see all the influences which had combined so powerfully to make her what she was, I had more charity for her, and I felt there was more to love or compassionate, and less to censure. Our friends and relatives, when they had heard these confessions, and candidly weighed them in the balance of reason and justice, confessed they could not have come to correct conclusions without them. Their opinions were changed and softened, and pity for her unhappy lot was mingled with feelings of disapproval of her conduct.

I am aware that the hasty reader may come to a very different conclusion, and not think so well of her as he did before reading her confession; but this would be unjust.

I will briefly place the whole subject in all its essential bearings, clearly and plainly before the reader. My mother inherited from her parents a morally defective organization, and her education made the matter worse. She was naturally willful and cunning, and could keep her thoughts and intentions to herself; and was inclined to work in secret, when she could best accomplish her object. She was very passionate, and often allowed her temper to triumph over her better judgment. She lacked principle, and her father's example increased the evil. She had an exalted opinion of of herself, and esteemed too lightly the opinions of others. Now, as she was not lacking in benevolence, and had large intellectual powers, a keen imagination, an intense love of the beautiful and sublime, had she been educated under more favorable influences, she would have been a very different being,—she would have been guided, usually, by the superior faculties of her mind, and so her character would have been almost the opposite from what it was.

Her early training was not conducive to the development of her better nature, and the outrageous deception, and the fearful blasting of her cherished hopes, embittered her whole being, called the lower faculties into active exercise, and deadened her nobler impulses. She was left in a state which may be justly considered moral insanity. This view of the subject, though defective, I believe to be substantially correct. Sinful propensities were inherited from parent to child, and unpropitious circumstances combined to strengthen and give them the control; and, though the result is to be deprecated, it could not well have been otherwise. It was these, and similar considerations, which caused us all to change our opinions which we had long held in relation to my mother, and view her character from a different standpoint.

I found, in this matter, food for reflection, which I required, and which did me good. I thought my own course would have been very different, if I had known my mother better,—known of sufferings, disappointments and wrongs. Could I have seen her heart unveiled, and had a clear understanding of the causes which made it what it was, I should have had more charity.

I fear that we often heap reproaches upon people, and treat them with insult and contempt, when, could we know all, we should commiserate their unfortunate lot, and strive to make them happier, rather than render them more wretched. Instead of looking, with truth-seeking eyes, to learn the causes of wrong-doing, we jump at conclusions, and judge the offender worthy of nought but stripes and death, forgetting that, had the same circumstances surrounded us, we should have been as bad, and perhaps worse. We show but little mercy to the criminal, though he may be the victim of circumstances beyond his control. If society, by-laws, and customs, educates men of crime, we punish them none the less severely. We feel that justice should be done, "though the heavens fall;" and yet are guilty of the worst species in justice ourselves. It is with society in general; it is so with individuals.

My mother's confessions I read to all our friends and relatives, that they might view her character through the clear medium of unvarnished truth. I was happy to find that it changed and softened the opinions and feelings of all.

It was now the first month in summer,—the month of roses, bright days, sweet zephyrs and clear skies. I have always loved June, very, very much. When is the earth so beautiful, the air so fragrant, and the sunbeams so golden and delightful? What gorgeous robes the trees put on,—robes of greenest leaves and bright tinted flowers.

"'Till the whole forest stands displayed,
In full luxuriance to the shining gales,

* * * * * *

"'——the country far diffused around
One boundless blush, one white empurpled shower
Of mingled blossoms, where the raptured eye
Hurries from joy to joy,——.'"

Such is June in New England, and hence it is the most beautiful month in all the year. In this description the part of May should be included.

More than twelve months has passed since I had parted from Helen Means, leaving her in tears. Since my return, a thousand things had prevented me visiting her. The longer I delayed, the more impatient I grew; for I was anxious to hear from her own sweet lips that she loved me.

Everything being now arranged, so that I could spend as much time at my uncle's as I might desire, I set off, with high hopes of speedily winning and wearing the brightest gem which earth or heaven contained for me. A few hours ride brought me to the long wished for goal. My feelings now became warm and excited, and I rushed impetuously into the house, supposing, of course, that Helen would fly to my arms, and hold me in a passionate embrace. I knew she would, if she felt as I did.

Hearing the piano, I bent my steps to the parlor, and there; as I expected and desired, was Helen, alone. She was playing a beautiful tune, and so absorbed in the music that she did not observe me when I entered the room. I stood for a moment, and gazed upon her in mingled admiration and surprise. She was now a beautiful woman, with her pure, elevated soul looking out of her eyes, beaming from her countenance.

I thought I would approach her unobserved. She heard my step, looked around and saw me; but instead of rushing into my arms, she arose from her seat very deliberately, extending me her hand, bidding me welcome home again. She seemed perfectly calm, except that she became paler, her lip quivered a little, and her hand slightly trembled. She was paler, I noticed, as she sat at the piano, than when I had last seen her, and about her eyes was the sad look of her childhood. It lay there, as the shadow of death lies upon the face of a lovely cherub child, not marring but softening the tints of its light and beauty.

"Welcome home again, Henri!" she said; "I am very happy to see you. Your health is good, I hope."

I was not prepared for this stoical coolness, and, for the first time in my life I felt at a loss what to do or say.

"My health is—very good. You look pale. Are you not well?"

"I am not so healthy as I was a year ago; but hope to be, a year hence."

"Yes—so do I,—I mean—that I hope you will be well soon."

"We have beautiful weather now; it was delightful when you left us, a year ago. But June is more beautiful than May."

"The weather is more beautiful, I think; but I fear—that—you—we have changed too."

"Most likely. But do you mean that we have changed for the better? Was it May then with our hearts, and is it June now?"

"I fear not, unless June is much colder than May. I do not like the change; for there is more of shadow, and less of sunlight."

"We can judge more correctly when we learn what effect new scenes have had upon you. New York, I am told, is a bad place for a young man."

Helen !"

"Nay, do not be alarmed. I think you have to much principle to do anything very vicious ; but we are all liable to err when we are surrounded by temtations,"

"Helen, how you have changed !"

"So have you."

"But not as you have."

"I suppose not. A year changes us all ; but the change in each one is not general, but individual."

"I did not mean that."

"Then you must explain, or I cannot get at your meaning."

"I will do so. Your friendly regards and feelings for me have changed."

"O, no! they never were stranger than they are ot this moment. And when I thought that marriage would end those sweet relations which had existed between us for so many years, I prayed as ardently for your happiness as I ever had done."

"But marriage can never end them."

"Circumstances have already changed them, as you well know ; and at some future time marriage may enable them."

"No, no, Helen ! I will never marry, unless I marry——"

"Your uncle and aunt are in the libary. Come, let me intraduced you to them ; they will be rejoiced to see you.."

"Not now, Helen ; I would talk with you longer. I was about to say——"

"You will stay with us many weeks, I hope. and there will be plenty of time for pleasant chat,—come." And she led the way to the library, and I could do no less than follow her.

The Pope has issued an allocution addressed to the Roman Catholic Bishops in America, which seems to be chiefly aimed at secret orders, and especially the Free Masons. These are denounced as hostile to the spirit of the Church, and the excuse that in this country that these orders are purely charitable is denied. The Pope considers them fully as dangerous here as anywhere, though in what practical was is not specified. The Catholic clergy in this Republic can scarcely be held as derelict in the matter, for they have never ceased to labor to prevent the members of their flocks from belonging to these orders. Most persons of all faiths in America have long since been satisfied of the utter harmlessness of these orders, and hence their amazing popularity all over the county.

The Democratic city of Brooklyn has to endure a great robbery of its treasury this city has always been under Democratic control and the wholesale peculations indulged in by the Democratic politicians in connection with a similar robbery of the treasury of Fairfield Co., Ohio by Democratic officials. This shows the imperative necessity of putting the treasuries of the state and nation under Democratic control.

ALICE.—"Do you know, uncle that that horrid Mr. Blinks declares that you have taken to hard drinking ?" Uncle George.—"Not true my dear—no ! Never drank easier in my life."

"WHAT was the result of the trial of that horse-stealer ?" asked a Missourian of a neighbor. "Oh, he was left in suspence."

A Very Valuable Book.

"The Undeveloped West; or, Five Years in the Territories." Being a Complete History of that vast region between the Mississippi and the Pacific; its Resources, Climate, Inhabitants, Natural Curiosities, etc., with Life and Adventure on Prairies, Mountains, and the Pacifice Coast. By J. H. Beadle, Western Correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial and Author of "Life in Utah," etc.

The National Publishing Co., of Philadelphis, has just issued one of the most remarkable and attractive books of the century. It is well known to every one that, far beyond the Mississippi, and stretching over half the continent, is a vast region which we vaguely term "The Great West"—a region abounding in the most wonderful natural formations, rich in precious mineral deposits, and offering the greatest attractions to the settler and the tourist. Though so often spoken of, it is almost an "unknown land."

Mr. Beadle went into this region for the avowed purpose of seeing and describing it, and his journeyings and observations were all governed by a fixed purpose, that of discovering and making known the actual character, condition and resources of the country visited by him. He first traversed the States of Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Kansas, examining the lands, and living and conversing with the people of those sections. For five years he kept moving from point to point, exploring the Territories, and the great and rich States of the Pacific Coast, encountering strange people and innumerable hard ships and braving many dangers in his wanderings among the savages He visited the rich mines of Colorado, Utah, Nevada and Idaho; passed into California and Oregon, and there enjoyed peculiar advantages for seeing and investigating the resources and curiosities of those remarkable States He spent considerable time in New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, and his account of his observations and discoveries in those strange and deeply interesting portions of our country will commend his book to the careful consideration of the scholar, as well as to all who seak practical information or amusement. His only companions in his travels in Arizona were Indian guides, and for weeks during his explorations in that Territory he never saw the face of a white man.

To prospective emigrants and settlers in the "Fare West," this history of that vast region will prove an invaluable assistance, supplying as it does, a want long felt of a full, authentic and reliable guide to climate, soil, products, distances, localities, means of travel, etc. It may be relied upon, for it contains no second-hand information.

It is comprised in one large octavo volume of 823 pages, an illustrated with 240 fine engravings of the scenery, lands, mines, people and curiosities of the Great West, and a new map of the region described.

The low price at which the work is issued brings it within the reach of all, and the great popular interest in the subject, and established reputation of the author, combine to make it the best and most popular book of the day. It is sold by subscription only, and agents are wanted in every county.

JUST OUT—THE NEW LIGHT RUNNING

HOWE

Sewing Machine

THE GRANDEST PRODUCTION OF INVENTIVE GENIUS.

The new factory of the Howe Company is nearly completed, and

1000

ARE NOW BEING MANUFACTURED AND SOLD DAILY!

The total number sold last year was 220,000, which far exceeds the sales of any other single machine.

THE ONLY MACHINE MADE ON THOROUGHLY SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES.

Combining Strength, Simplicity & Durability with Lightness of Running.

It is superior to all in the following respects:
1st. Simplicity of construction.
2nd. Ease of management.
3d. Lightness of running.
4th. Non-liability to get out of repair.
5th. Durability—it being made of the finest hardened steel.
6th. Perfection of tension on both upper and lower threads, and the ease with which they are controlled by the operator. It makes a perfect Lock Stitch on all kinds of goods and never breaks the thread.
7th. The strength and regularity of the new feed, which enables it to stitch soft or glazed, light, or heavy work equally well, and to cross heavy seams or fells without the slightest difficulty.

The new improved HEMMER, FELLER, BRAIDER, QUILTER and GUIDE; Also, OILER, BOTTLE OIL, Doz. NEEDLES, BOBBINS, &c., go with each Machine free of charge. In addition to these, we will give a Ruffler and an alpaca Hemmer with each machine, making more attachments than are given with any machine in use

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN JURUBEBA BLOOD PURIFIER

Is the most powerful cleanser, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.

It is specially adapted to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, Scrofula, &c., &c.

When weary and languid from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take place of energy and vigor the system needs a Tonic to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.

In the heat of Summer, frequently the Liver and Spleen do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to billious deangement.

DR. WELLS'

EXTRACT OF JERUBEBA

is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties; it will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthening the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED AND ENFEEBLED ORGANS.

It should be freely taken, as Jerubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

FOR STATE TREASURER,

HON. ROBERT W. MACKEY, of Allegheny Co

THE PLATFORM.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania, in convention assembled, renew their expressions of confidence in and devotion to the principles of Republicanism, and declare

First. That we heartily endorse and re-adopt the Republican National and State platforms of 1872.

Second. That the National Administration commands our continued confidence and is entitled, by its promotion of the best interests and prosperity of the Nation, to the earnest support of the people.

Third. That the administration of Gov. Hartranft calls for our warmest approbation. During the short time he has been in the Executive Department he has established a State policy which has justly endeared him to the people of this Commonwealth, and has amply justified the confidence we placed in him.

Fourth. That while earnestly in favor of Constitutional Reform, and of such a revision of our State Constitution as will make it an effective instrument in preventing and punishing the corrupt abuses that have crept in under our present system, we demand emphatically and especially, that whatever is done or left undone, the main purpose for which the Constitutional Convention was called, the absolute prevention of special legislation, shall be placed before the people as to secure their separate and enstive expression thereon.

Fifth. That the reduction of the State debt from $41,000,000 to $26,000,000, the repeal of all State taxes on real estate, the establishment of schools for the support of soldier's orphans, the maintenance of our excellant and prosperous system of common schools, the establishment of the policy of paying off our debt at the rate of two millions a year, and the generally flourishing condition of our prosperous old Commonwealth, are evidences that the Republicans, during their twelve years control in Pennsylvania, have faithfully administered her affairs and that the reins of government may safely be left in their hands,

Sixth. That there should be rigid economy in the State and National Administrations, and the taxes should be reduced in both as rapidly as consistant with good government, the maintenance of the public credit and certain extinguishment of State and National debts.

Seventh. That the public lands belong to the people, and should be sacredly reserved for homes for actual settlers, and we pronounce against all further grants of these lands to corporations, Eigth. That adequate provision should be made by law for the protection of persons engaged in mining and other hazardous forms of labor.

Ninth. That as retrenchment is required to lighten the burden of taxation and to continue reduction of the public debt, an increase of salaries is unwise, and we condemn without reserve voting for or receiving increased pay for services already rendered, whether in State or nation, and demand that the provisions of the late act of Congress, by which the salaries were increased, should be promptly and unconditionally repealed.

Tenth. That we heartily denounce corruption wherever found, and are sincerely desirous for honesty, economy and political purity in all official administrations. To secure this is the duty of every citizen; and to this end every good man should feel bound not only to participate in politics, but to labor actively to see that none but good men secure party appointments or nominations.

Eleventh. That the practice of loading the appropriation bill, essential to the support of the government, with objectionable legislation in the shape of amendments toward the close of the session is a prolific source of abuse and a fraud upon the people, and its reform is urgently demanded.

Twelfth. That as the country and home industry have uniformly prospered under a tariff so arranged as to afford both revenue and protection, the present tariff should be left undisturbed; and as all tariffs are levied primarily for revenue, it would be a poor government, indeed, which could not afford to arrange its details so as to encourage the growth of home manufactures, and the creation of a remunerative home market for all the products of our soil.

Thirteenth. That order and security in the States lately in rebellion must come through the stern enforcement of the laws enacted to protect life, liberty, and freedom of thought, and cannot be secured by rendering these just and necessary laws inoperative through executive clemency to unrepentant assassins, now undergoing punishment in pursuance of law.

Fourteenth. That as, during the time the Republican party has been in power, it has had to confront graver difficulties and more new and perplexing questions of government, than ever were presented to any other party to solve, and has solved them so judiciously and wisely that the country indorses its decisions and accepts its work, it is the only organization competent to meet the grave issues that are now constantly arising, so as to secure the just rights of the whole people.

Fifteenth. That we sympathize with every movement to secure for agriculture and labor their due influence, interests and rights, and the Republican party will be their ally in every just effort to attain that end.

THE WOULD-BE WORKINGMAN'S CHAMPION.

Col. Brown pays his respects to his personal opponants this week in a very forcible and bitter manner. We are now in hourly expectation of a knock down or a duel.—Watchman.

For once the Watchman gives us an item with a grain of truth, and it is so rare a circumstance that we chronicle it, and the grain of truth may be expressed in these words.

Brown has written a bitter article against certain lawyers in Bellefonte. And who are these men against whom this bitter article is written? Some of the best men in the place and most of them Republicans. And why is it that he regards these men as personal enemies? Have they ever done him any wrong? If they have he fails to show it. Their offence is that in a certain case of the commonwealth against Wilson Williams, in which these men were employed as counsel, the fact was proven that he (Brown) was a man of intemperate habits, or in other words a common drunkard; that he associated with the lowest of the low, that he called drunken negroes into his office and drank with them out of the same glass, and they got drunk together over the same bottle of whiskey, often staying until morning, showing them his list of subscribers.

Brown says in his article that it is capital against labor. We are constrained to say that we fail to see what the labor question has to do with the matter at all, unless drinking whisky is hard work, and we suppose he ought to know. But we do object to dragging the labor question into such a dirty pool as this. The labor interest does not require, nor do the laboring men desire such champions. If the success of the labor interest depended upon such championship, then we should say God help us and the laboring interest.

Is there a laboring man in Centre county that can be deceived by such silly sophistry as this? We think not. Is there a laboring man in the county that desires such a champion? If there is, we have yet to learn the fact. The cause of labor is too precious to be tampered with in this way, and the man who will endevor to enlist the labor element to his interest every time his own vices bring him into disrepute should be made to know that laboring men as a class are honest, temperate and loyal, and do not desire to allie themselves with men who have been unmindful of every honest duty and obligation to their party and their fellows. The man who would plot sly treason against his party would, should the opportunity ever occur, prove a traitor also to the laboring men. Therefore we urge the laboring men of Centre to put no trust in such would-be leaders, for "he who is deceived thereby is not wise."

We earnestly desire the success of every movement which has for its object the amelioration of the condition of the laboring masses, but in order for any movement to meet with success it must have leaders who are honest, temperate, clear headed and faithful. We say therefore to this would-be champion of the labor interest, fight your own private battles and if you are dragged into court for getting drunk stand up to it like a man, if you can, and not try to throw the burden of your infamy upon the backs of the laboring men. The labor movement is too noble a cause to be hampered by anything not pure and honest and good. It means more than bread and butter and work. It means the instalation into the heart of humanity of higher hopes, higher aspirations, sweeter thoughts and contemplations, stronger resolutions, greater efforts, more of manhood's power under development of all the faculties of the soul, clearer perceptions of the great purpose of terrestrial existance. Therefore it wants and must have men as standard bearers whose characters are above reproach, who are temperate and honest and true as the needle to the pole. When we see and hear of corrupt, intemperate men who we know could be bought for the merest trifle by unscrupulous capitol, striving for place and position through the influence of the laboring men, when we feel confident that if they once had the power they would bring about a condition of things which would cut out of the soul of every working man the hopes and aspirations and the probabilities to which they are daily striving, our blood runs cold and,—we wonder.

Readers of the REPUBLICAN, there is more in the labor question than most of you think. It concerns us all rich and poor alike. Its consumation means the elevation of the masses, the raising of the lower strata of society up to a broad plain of knowledge, refinement, purity, truth, temperance, in fact the ushering in of the millenium. It is the foundation of all these possibilities, the striving after and longing for which developes, educates and elevates the working men. The great danger to the labor interest has always been that the worst men have sought to be leaders. Lazy men who never do a day's work themselves but try to ride into notice, place and power, and use this glorious movement for a hobby-horse..

Our advice to the laboring men is to place none but laboring men on guard, take them from the workshop the forge and from the farm, let them leave the plow in the furrow and go and serve their fellows in what is destined to be one of the grandest reforms of these latter days.

SENATORIAL CONFEREE MEETING.

The republican conferees of this senatorial district met at Tyrone on Thursday, 4th September, 1873, when the following presented their credentials:

Centre—Edmund Blanchard, A. O. Furst, John T. Johnson.

Huntingdon—S. T. Brown, Hays Hamilton, Henry C. Robertson.

Juniata—D. D. Stone, Wm. M. Allison, J. Balsbach.

Mifflin—James M. Brown, John Henry, Horace J. Culbertson.

Wm. M. Allison, Esq., was appointed President, and H. J. Culbertson Secretary, after which S. T. Brown nominated P. P. DEWEES of Huntingdon, J. Balsbach Dr. J. P. STERRETT of Juniata, James M. Brown ADOLPHUS F. GIBBONEY of Mifflin, and A. O. Furst JOHN IRWIN JR., of Centre as candidates. The conferees then proceeded to ballot with the following result:

On the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th ballots each of the candidates had three votes; on the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, Dewees 3, Sterrett 4, Gibbony 1, Irwin 4; on the 10th and 11th each 3, when Mr Brown withdrew the name of Mr. Gibboney.

PERSECUTION.

For the REPUBLICAN.

MESSRS EDITORS:—At August Court a number of indictments were found and prosecuted to conviction under that provision of the Buckalew law, which prohibits intoxicaing liquors being furnished to habitual drunkards, insane persons, &c., whether with or without license. The habitual drunkard or insane person is neither plaintiff, defendent or necssarily a witness; and when his case is reached, he may be engaged in running either Democratic or Republican convention without furnishing ground for either the postponemnt of the trial or the adjournment of the court. One of these indictments was for furnishing intoxicating liquors to the editor of Brown's Republican, who devotes more than a column of his last paper to the abuse of every body in general and the counsel and witnesses in particular. Why? The verdict of the jury only established what was but too well known before, and he has not a word to say against the correctness of their finding. Five witnesses (and but to save time a hundred might have been called) each one of whom testified under oath to the fact of his unfortunate habits, and he does not throughout his whole column of abuse call in question the truth of their testimony. In fact no different evidence could have been given without manifest purjury. Then why this course and brutal attack upon the witnesses. Does he suppose that he can deter them and others from testifying to "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," hereafter, that for fear of such tirades? If so he will find himself greatly mistaken.

But his choisest billingsgate is reserved for attorneys engaged in the trial, whom he denounces in round terms as a "BASE AND HEARTLESS CONSPIRACY," Why? He is admitted by friends and foes alike to be a habitual drunkard. It needed no verdict of twelve sworn jurors to establish that fact in the community where he lives, as such the Buckalew Law denounces as criminal, not the habitual drunkard himself, but the individual who supplies him with the means of intoxication. One of these individuals was detected in the very act of committing this crime, and the offender was tried, convicted and punished. Brown himself, was neither indicted, tried or convicted. In reality he was the principal prosecutor, the head and front of this "base and heartless conspiracy," for he voluntarily furnished the habitual drunkard for the case, and made it a success. Had he not performed that essential part so effectually the jury must have acquitted the prisoner without leaving the box.

Several other defendants were tried convicted and sentenced for furnishing other habitual drunkards with intoxicating liquors, and are now in prison expiating their crimes, and we know of no reason why those who supply a drunken editor should be made an exception. Let all be "persecuted" alike

LETTER FROM SHON.

EGYPT, Vots in Haines,
Sept. 8, 1873.

Mr. 2 by 10:—Fust I tell you somding vot vas not verry funny to some odter feller vot I nose, and vots name is shon, too, an dat shon has an old man, too vot is not my old man, neither is dat odter shon me, nor dis shon vot is me, dat odter shon vot is he, an vot gets himself into trouble pecause somepody vot dosent enyhow no much or nossing. He seats dem dings vot I rites to you apout dem odter times—dem he reats to dat odter shons old man, and now dat poor feller, dat odter shon, vot isent me, his arms an legs and odter end an effry dings is pooty sore after dat, an now he looks like de King of de canable ilelands, pooty near, an out by de old bake oven dare lays a pile of leetle apple trees an sthick and sphlinter vot vil do de bakin mit a long vile to come hereafter dis time. I guess dat odter shon, he vouttent gif a cent for all de sweet cider and apple butter vots in Egypt, nor enyding vot comes from an apple tree now enyhow enymore. Poor shon. I pittiy you, I do, an heres my regards, an if you vant to have dat feller (vat reats dat to de old man) licked all over mithimself for nossing pooty quick, I nose a feller vot kin do it, an his name is shon, too, an vich "he paddles his own canoo" enyhow an dis is his secret in full.

Now I tells you somdings apout dat meeting vot de gypshuns haf sinse de odter times. An now it vas down in de darkest hind corner OF EGYPT, down in dat black hole, vere de Black Crook lifs, "in Himmereck" vere effryding is pooty black inside an all over vite washed outside mit good dings soforse. Dare is vere is vas, an I pays a feller 15 cents an maybe he tells me all apout it, (now you gifs me credit, for dat vas vot his price vas.) an I tells you pooty soon vot his name vas vot foold deem gypshuns enyhow.

Effry member brings dis time along midhimself a bottle full of "Hoffmans Druppa" vot is a gute medisin for the Optional-Collerre-Morbus-Local, vitch is badder and vors in Egypt, verry pat indeed, so pat dat de alkahol runs short several times pefore, now its a goot deal vors den vot vas de Cerebro-Spinal-Back-Bone pefore dis sometime ago—vors on de "Hoffman Druppa" enyhow—an its hard, too, on de poor sufferin gypshuns (ven de alkohal runs short) ven they coultent make de Druppa anymore.

Now dis time a goot many fellers omest from all over Egypt effry place arount, an dey has a big meetin, I guess pooty near all de onest farmers vas dare dis times, an dey commense de fun mit a song an den de all sit down on dare nees an effry feller, he puts his hands up mit his face an he takes a leetle medicin quick fust, an den he makes some noise a vile pefore he sits up, right again.

De old man makes a big speech dis times, an his subject vas "von i for another, an another tooth for the first one" or somdings like dat, but enyhow never mind, he got dings pooty soon ret hot an still a heating all over, an if he hadent got a gripe of de opshunals, I guess maybe he vould haf blowd up mit gass burnin all oyer; but the gripe doubled him over on his nees, an effry poddy gits de optionals too den pooty quick, an dey all sits down on dare ness again, and takes some more Hoffmans droppa, den de sits up rights again, and dey holler and sing a funny song for a vile, an dat cools dem off a leetle an den dey hold a gossip mitdemselves omongs each odter. Von feller he says, "de best vay to do mit de butter vas to schlap it down mit de tub and salt it mit the summer time, den ven de vinter comes arount an de price goes big up, work it all in rolls out and"—(an here another feller blows off), "schmear it over with a dim stread of fresh butter," and den (another feller blows off too) an he says "take it to the sthore keeper and pay off your kount." Now it vas getred hot again—another feller he blows off now (an he says) "an ven it doesent pay de kount, make the sthore keeper vate till next summer ven your meat gets full of bugs and sofose, den you takes dat to him for de ballance," an now I guess, maybe it sthrikes down in goot many bards all over an it vas still heating an de hole congregashun vas retty to blow off mithemself. Fust day looked for knot holes, I dinks maybe, for dey all lookd down, den effry boddy at the odter feller, an de odter feller lookd at de odter, an den dey all saw how it vas, and den dey gits another grips and effry poddy took some more opshunal collerre morbus, for de medisin an dey all goes "over de river Jordan," dinks maybe in de same ferry boat, after dat, an now de old man "pours ile on de troubled vaters" mit a nice leetle address. He seys dese dings vasent much akount to talk apout, dat it vasent any vors den to mix de clean lard mit de unclean, and sell for clean lard, get de piggest price vots going an he nose a goot many vot does dem dings. It vas petter to be naborly an mind your own pissness mid yourself an not talk to much, "an now I gifs you a leetle advice apout manufactoring pissness in dis naborhood, vot dey dont no anydings apout anyhow. You petter gust go for dare monish rite along de hole vay out, and charge de piggist price vot you can get for anydings and look out sharp mityourself for No. 1. Dey dosent no how to keep dare money, or dey voultent spend it on sich Tomfooleries and dings vots busts dem soon higher den a kite up. Dare enterprise isent eny akount mit us vots in Egypt nor any poddy els vot dosent no anydings much of any akount enyhow apout dese dings. Lissen! Now, I dinks maybe dat infernal Shon is arount somevers an ve had petter sthop pooty quick right off," an dat vas, vat vas de matter mit Hanna—an dis is all vot I got for dem 15 cents vot I gifs to Sol-Chews Harp de vondering jew. I rite again sometimes.

SHON.

P. S.—"Vot paddles his own canoo."

MAGAZINES.

The September number of Wood's HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE is on our table. We always have a good word to say for this publication—it is such a whole-souled book—so wide awake, so lively and entertaining, yet always so chaste and refined. It is a regular little go-ahead, too, as comparison between its numbers will prove. We learn that the firm of S. S. Wood & Co. dissolved in March last, the "Co." (S. E. Shutes, Mayor of Newburg,) retaining possession of the magazine, and recalling H. V. Osborne (Temoroon) as editor. So, though the publication really changed hands, it has not suffered from the management of a new publisher or new editor, but under the redoubled efforts of its energetic proprietor, has gained new force and attractiveness. Price only one dollar a year.

YOUNG FOLKS JOURNAL.—We have on our table the first number that we ever saw of the Young Folks Journal, edited by a family of girls, we have looked it over carefully and we like it for it is high toned, pure, instructive, entertaining, filled full with good thoughts, a promulgator of truth, an insentive to virtue. It is the kind of literature which should circulate freely, for it can but have a tendency to elevate the moral standard of the community and do great good to the son's and daughter's of men. Therefore, we wish the Lukens Sisters, success in their enterprise, and that their little Journal, pure and white in morals as the paper it is printed on, may drop like beautiful snow flakes all over the length and breadth of the republic, appealing to the hearts of our young people for virtue, truth, honesty, and the love of God. Any communication addressed to Lukens Sisters Brinton, Allegheny County, Pa. will no doub receive prompt attention.

"OLD AND NEW" for September contains the following:—

OLD AND NEW (About the relative situation of the Roman Catholic church, and the Civil Governments in Europe.) By Mr. Hale.
My time, and what I've done with it. By F. C. Burnand. Chapters XXI-XXII.

MUSICAL REVIEW.

"PICKING Cherries down the Lane," "Happy Hours," are two new songs by the renowned Millard, both containing all the elements of popularity and both really excellent. They can be had at any Music Store, for the trifle of 40 cents, each, or will be sent free of postage, on receipt of price, by the publishers,

LEE & WALKER,
922 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

THE MOST UNHAPPY PERSON in the world is the Dyspeptic. Everything looks dark and gloomy; he feels "out of sorts" with himself and everybody else. Life is a burden to him. This can all be changed by taking Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of Iron.) Cases of 27 years' standing have been cured by it.

ADVICE FOR EVERYBODY THAT COSTS NOBODY ANYTHING.

Lotions and cosmetics make a superficial coating on the skin, give an artificial color, easily seen, but are vilely destructive of the color, texture and prematurely old looking, exactly describe the appearence of those who habitually "paint their faces." If you would have the clear, transparent, healthy and soft tinted complexion which nature gives, free from pimples, tan, freckles, or all other disfigurements, use Hand Sapolio—the most effective and fragrant toilet soap ever manufactured. Sold by all dealers at 10 and 15 cents a cake.

SPONGE CAKE.—To the yolks of six eggs, well beaten, add three-quarters lb. of white sugar, juice of one lemon, one-half lb. of flour, having in it one measure of Banner Baking Powder, and the whites of six eggs, beaten very stiff.

Each can of the Banner Baking Powder contains a small measure to be used even full, according to printed directions. If you cannot obtain this really valuable article from your grocer, send twenty-five cents by mail, addressed to Banner Baking Powder, P. O. Lock Box., 317, Pittsburgh, Pa., and you will receive, postage paid, a quarter pound package, together with a list of fifty valuable Recipes.

NATHANIEL BECK keeps constantly on hand a large and well selected stock of Cigars Snuff fine cut and plug Tobacco; also pipes and Cigar holders of every variety. Call and see. Next door to entrance of Bush House.

DR WISTAR'S WILD CHERRY BALSAM.—The Balsamic compound has become a home fixture. Let all who suffer, and have in vain attempted to cure their coughs, colds, bronchial or pulmonary complaints, make use of this unequaled remedy. It can be relied upon. the mass of testimony that has been published since its introduction, being ample proof of its efficacy.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Your attention is specially invited to the fact, that the National Banks are now prepared to receive subscription to the Capital Stock of the Centennial Board of Finance. The funds realized from this source are to be employed in the erection of the buildings for the International Exhibition, and the expenses connected with the same. It is confidently believed that the Keystone State will be represented by the name of every citizen alive to patriotic commemoration of the one hundred birth-day of the nation. The shares of stock are offered for $10 each, and subscribers will recieve a handsomely steel engraved Certificate of Stock, suitable for framing and preservation as a national memorial.

Interest at the rate of six per cent per annm will be paid on all payments of Centennial Stock from date of payment to January 1, 1876.

Subscribers who are not near a National Bank can remit a check or post-office order to the undersigned.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. Where the parts are not gone, its effects are marvelous. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are endered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Price, 50c. a bottle, large bottles $1. 00. J. B. ROSE & Co.,
53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

DANGEROUS GROUND.

Of the many that live, what hosts may be found
That are venturing daily on dangerous ground,
That are treading, some boldly, the paths that seem fair,
Never heeding the sign-board that bids them "Beware!"

The youth, but a novice, who takes "the first glass,"
The gambler's poor victim, unthinking, alas!
The maid who is given to flirting, are found
Among those who venture on dangerous ground.

The lips that dare open to utter a lie—
The tongue of the slanderer, wary and sly—
The hand that betrayeth a brother, are found
With the mortal who treadeth on dangerous ground.

There's not a heart, however rude,
But hath some little flower
To brighten up its solitude
And scent the evening hour.

There's not a heart, however cast
By grief and sorrow down,
But hath some memory of the past
To love and call its own.

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this Department of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

Work After Harvest.

We will again mention to farmers that there is no time in the year when meadows and fields, from which wheat and oats have been taken, may be so much benefited as immediately after the crop has been removed; for at that time the farmer knows just what condition they are in, as to protectiveness, etc. Now is the time to mark those spots where the grass or grain was light; and if from being low and wet; remedy, when time will permit, by drainage; if from slack of fertility, bring up into a proper condition.

It is often the case that fields do not actually require the application of fertilizers to the entire surface when said fields are as a whole in good producing order, and a little observation at harvest time will determine the matter, for there are no better indicators of good and poor soil than the plants grown upon it themselves.

The present is also a good time for removing obstructions to the mowing machine, horse rake, etc.

It does not pay to mow around stakes, stumps, logs, snags and bushes, year after year, but it does pay to remove them to give the machines full and clear sweep.

We do not approve of hauling manure upon grass land at any season of the year but spring; for if drawn out in the summer it is liable to dry up and a good deal of its fertilizing element be carried away by the atmosphere; if drawn out in fall or winter, the heavy rains will, while the earth is frozen, wash a portion away to the streams; but if drawn out and spread upon the surface in the spring just as the grass begins to grow it is soon covered and the warm rains wash it down around the roots of the grass where the full benefit is received. This matter is mentioned in connection with subject under consideration, as many farmers are in the habit of hauling out manure upon the grass after haying, believing it to be profitably done at that time as at any other.

Now is a good time to level down knolls and mounds and fill up uneven spots. The advantage in doing the work now lies in exposing the soil which is laid bare to the action of the atmosphere, frost and sun, for months before seeding is done, which is necessary to obtain a growth of grass. Spots where knolls have been leveled in summer may be seeded the following March successfully. If the land is stiff clay, give a coating of loamy soil applying the seed; by a little care the alluvial portion just beneath the sod of the mound may be saved for this purpose.

Stones should never be piled upon a meadow. They are unsightly and always in the way; haul them off, and if they can be put to no use, pile where you will never have to run around or move them again.

When to Cut Timber.—I cut down about half an acre of small growth of young timber, mostly hickory, five to fourteen inches in diameter. It lay in the tree as it fell till the following winter, and spring, when I trimmed it up, and chopped it into stove-wood, and put it in the wood house. In the winter of 1871 and 1872 I burned it for common fire-wood, and have not discovered any worm-eating or powder-post as is common for wood in such circumstances. I saved a few butts for axe-handles. I split one of them the other day, and found it as withy and free from worm-eating as the day it was cut.

Farmers Keeping Bees.

Most farmers are not informed of the necessities of modern bee-keeping, so they have but indifferent "luck" in the management of bees. Professional apiarists, with their patent hives and Italian queens have frightened common farmers out of the business, in which in old times they got along very well. The editor of the Bee Journal has a talk with the beginner, which may be understood by plain farmers who keep a few bees:

July is the month when the honey harvest closes in the middle and eastern states. Therefore beginners should not think of increasing their stock any more this season but be content to prepare their stock for winter after they finish up partly filled boxes and become strong in numbers, except when there is plenty of buckwheat, which often affords a large surplus of honey. In the great west and north-west where prairie flowers furnish late pasturage, bees will store enough for winter besides much surplus in August and September, as less honey is then consumed in breeding.

Beginners should examine stock that have cast swarms. The old queen went out with the first born swarm and a young one must be reared, and if she is lost when flying out to meet the drones, the stock will be without a queen, or eggs, or young larvæ, from which to rear one. If eggs and young brood are not found in the cells within three weeks after the stock casts the first swarm, it is probably queenless. This can be ascertained by examining the combs for eggs and larvæ. An experienced bee-keeper can usually tell a queenless stock by their appearance at the entrance of the hive especially if he walks through the yard within a day after the stock loses its queen. If a stock shows signs of being queenless two or more days in succession, he becomes satisfied that an examination is required, that he may give the stock a queen or cell before it becomes reduced in numbers. Many keepers, or those who own bees, let such stocks get so reduced in numbers that they cannot protect their combs, and are either robbed of their honey by other bees, or the combs are destroyed by moth worms hatching in the combs and the owner (not a bee-keeper) reports "a stock destroyed by the millers," whereas the moth only destroyed the combs because he has let the stock run down for want of a queen.

Many beginners destroy their bees by increasing too fast, while others destroy them by transferring too late, and others by attempting to Italianize them by rearing queens to them. If a stock is prevented in any way from rearing brood they will probably be deficient in both bees and honey, and unprepared to enter winter quarters, but even though they have enough honey, the bees are old and will die off so rapidly in early spring that there will not be enough bees to gather honey, or keep the eggs and brood warm, and they will be lost. It is risky to Italianize by rearing queens from cells inserted in stocks even in the early part of the season, and will usually prevent increase from such stocks, but as late as July, Italianizing should only be done by introducing a fertile queen.

Ducks Desirable.—Ducks should be raised more than is customary, especially where a tight fence encloses the garden. It is not necessary that there should be plenty of water, for a tub made of half a barrel set in the ground filled with water, will answer. Ducks seldom roam abroad, and they feed on insects much more than hens. A flock of a dozen turned into a garden for an hour or so a day will clean out a good share of the bugs. The only kind to be kept are Rouen or Aylesburg. Both have valuable qualities, but the Rouen is heaver, often weighing 12 to 14 pounds a pair, and they are less particular as to water. Ducks are as profitable as turkeys, while they lay more and are easier to raise. In some parts of England ducks are raised so extensively that single stations sometimes ship to the London market by the ton and even car-load. Common varieties in comparison are not worth raising. A flock of ducks with their brilliant colors is a pleasing sight, and children are attracted by them full as much as as by any other fowl.

Grapes may be kept fresh all the winter by gathering them in the fall and putting up in wheat chaff, and kept in a dry place.

Breed Walking Horses.—Whether for traveling or for farm purposes a fast even walk is the best gait for a horse, and breeders should pay attention to this matter. In selecting a stallion to breed from by all means select one that can walk fast. A slow walking stallion will be likely to get slow walking colts; while the stallion that has a long, rapid, spirited stride will be likely to beget colts of a similar action Then there is a great deal in breeding to a horse with spirit and ambition. These cold-blooded horses will begat cold-blooded colds. The nearer you can approach the thoroughbreed, even for obtaining a fast walker, the better. There is game there, and spirit, and endurance, and stamina, and style. There are the neat, bony heads and prominent eyes, the small ears, the capacious nostrils, the large lungs and chests, the well developed muscles, the bones as dense as ivory. Even for walkers, then, get the nearest to thoroughbreed possible, and the same for trotters, and, of course, the same for runners. You have then horses fit for any company and for any purpose—to haul the plough, or buggy, or carriage, or to carry you upon their backs. Breed large, fine mares to thoroughbreed horses, and you will get colts that you will not be ashamed to have your friends see.

Meadows and permanent pastures that are moss bound and need renovating can be much improved by going over them with a heavy harrow two or three times each way, and then putting upon them a mixture of 10 bushels of ashes, 300 lbs. of bone dust, 2 bushels of salt and 1 of plaster to the acre, and then sowing the following combination of grass seeds, about in the proportion given, to each acre: 10 lbs of Timothy, ½ a bushel each Ky., Blue Grass, Orchard Grass, Perennial Rye Grass and Red Top, and 1 quart of Sweet Scented Vernal Grass. Harrow again and roll. This dose of fertilizer and the quantity of seed named will cost a good round sum, but the results will justify the outlay.

A San Francisco milliner recently hit upon a novel expedient to advertise her store. She had among her assistants one remarkably handsome young woman, and having attired this damsal in the choicest garments of the establishment, placed her in the window of the store. The girl stood in a half reclining attitude perfectly still, an immense crowd had assmbled to see the beautiful milliner's sign. The crowd soon grew to a perfect mob, quite blocking the street until the curtains were lowered and the living model releived from her position.

No subscriber to a newspaper should ever think of ordering his paper stopped until he has paid up all his arrearages.

ADDRESS F. BLIGGET,
Bland and P. O,
8-24tf Centre Co., Pa.

MY CREED.

I hold that Christian grace abounds
Where charity is seen; that when
We climb to heaven, 'tis on the rounds
Of love to men.

I hold all else, named piety,
A selfish scheme, a vain pretense,
Where centre is not, can there be Circumference?

This I moreover hold, and dare
Affirm where'er my rhyme may go;
Whatever things be sweet or fair,
Love makes them so;

Whether it be the lullabies
That charm to rest the nursling bird,
Or that sweet confidence of sighs
And blushes made without a word,

Whether the dazzling and the flush
Of softly sumptuous garden bowers,
Or by some cabin door, a bush
Of ragged flowers.

'Tis not the wide phylactery,
Nor stubborn fast, nor stated prayers,
That makes us saints; we judge the tree
By what it bears.

And when a man can live apart
From works, on theologic trust,
I know the blood about his heart
Is dry as dust.

SUNDAY READINGS.—No. 25.

And he trembling and astonished, said, Lord what wilt thou have me to do? and the Lord said unto him, arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.—Acts 9-6

The question which is asked in the text "Lord what wilt thou have me to do," comes to us in the solitude of the sick chamber, in the tumult and rush of life's crowded arena, and by the graves that cover the forms of the dear departed mourned. And it is also intended for the merchant in his engrossing cares, for the reaper in the field, for the mother surrounded by her little ones, for the young and old, the rich and poor, ignorent and learned.

It is individual in its application and therefore indirectly rebukes meddlesome interference with the spiritual condition of others.—What wouldst thou have me to do?—not what should be the primary condition of my neighbors. It is so natural to turn from the contemplation of one's own short-comings to the weakness, follies or sins of one's associates, and too seldom is the beam in the eye a hindrance to the quick detection of a mote in the eye of another.

When the soul, weary of sin, sick with disappointments, conscious of trusts betrayed and waning opportunities for amendment, would turn from the paths that lead away from life and peace, the first utterance of the wakened spirit would be, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" It feels the necessity of some positive act in the right direction, something tangible to mark the change that has begun its spiritual condition.

What wouldst thou have me to do? The answer comes in the first duty that lies at one's hand; that accomplished another and another in long procession, fill up the span of existance, and it there come doubts, God pardons them through sincerity of purpose. The failure too often lies in overlooking or refusing the first duty proffered; that neglected the others stand out in less distinctive light and are perhaps never recognized.

Then again the grand acheivement, the brilliant opportunity are waited for though they come to the few distant intervals. It is the small voice heard in the home, the counting-room, the field where the husbandman labors, that speaks to the great heart of man, bidding it leave the results in the hands of God, and remain content in the consciousness of submission and obedience to the Divine will.

It is not simply what is thought or beleived but what is done that makes the total of character. Actions must prove the sincerity of conviction, and he who strives will find the field of action broad enough for all his energies. What man who ever sought ever failed to find the opportunity for widespread of knowledge? Who does not know of the weak whom a judicious word might strengthen, or the falling whom a strong, tender hand might have saved.

Lord, what wouldst thou have me to do? Do not point at thy neighbor, into whose sphere of life thou canst not fully enter, and ask the vital question for him. God's answer to him will never reach our understanding, and was never intended to do so, since the answer lies between him and his God.—It is strictly individual. Parent cannot answer for child, husband for wife, or friend for friend, since there are no two with the same responsibilities and temptations. Our tasks in life are varied as our lots. In some households sickness, poverty, death, lay waste the pleasant places, while others are protected from these evil; but could we enter those others, we should find God's providence there, some sweet, some bitter, unlike our own perhaps, quite as real.

If your yearning petition "what wilt thou have me to do?" be answered by light upon our doubtful path, then let us gladly press on to the fulfillment of each duty that presents itself, however great the sacrifice, however wearisome the toil; for in so doing the precious consciousness of a Father's approving smile makes the burden light, the dark place radiant with a beam from heaven.

Life's work with each of us will soon draw to a close. "A little while," said the Savior "I am with you," and thus might we say to the friends who surround, the scenes which so engross us. To work while the day lasts is true wisdom; to labor faithfully and hopefully in the Christian's bounden duty. In this labor alone the coveted rest in found, the sweetest peace, the brighteet foreshadowing of the world without a cloud.

The Prayer of Agassiz.

The Christian Union (H. W. Beecher), speaking of the speach by Professor Agassiz at the opening of the Anderson School of Natural History, says: "After a few opening words, felicitously suited to put their minds into fellowship, Agassiz said tenderly, and with touching frankness, "I think we have need of help. I do not feel that I can call any one here to ask a blessing for us. I know I would not have anybody pray for us at this moment. I ask of you a moment to pray for ourselves." Upon this, the great scientist—in an age which so many scientists have concluded that praying is quite an unscientific and very useless proceedings—bowed his head reverently; his pupils and friends did the same, and there was a silence that was very solemn and very beautiful, each spirit was free to crave of the Great Spirit the blessing that was needed. For our own part it seems to us that this scene of Agassiz and his pupils, with heads bowed in silent prayer for the blessing of the God of nature, to be given to that school then opened for the study of nature, is a spectacle for some artist to spread out worthily upon canvas, and to be kept alive in the memories of mankind. What are coronations, royal pageants, the parade of armies, to a scene like this? It heralds the coming of the new heavens and new earth—the golden age when nature and man shall be reconciled, the conquest of truth shall supercede the conquests of brute force."

REPUBLICAN unity and cordial support of the State ticket, is a source of great annoyance to the Democracy, who have no other hope of victory, except what may be afforded by the dissatisfaction of their opponents. As long as the Republican Party of Pennsylvania is as united as it now is, it will rule the State, and as long as it continues to erect platforms and present candidates such as are now in the field, it will be united and strong all of which, of course, is very discouraging to the Demoracy.

CONGRESSMAN Frye, of Maine, declares that the consumption of intoxicating liquor in Maine is not one-fourth what it was twenty years ago; that in the rural districts the sale and use have almost entirely ceased; that the law of itself has created a temperance sentiment which is marvalous, and to which opposition is powerless.

THE editor of the—Gazette having heard that sulphur in the socks will prevent cholera, has worried a stick of brimstone out of the new druggist, and now wants some one to loan him a pair of socks while he tries the thing.

FORWARD and Loquacious Youth.—"By Jove, you know, upon my word, now—if I were to see a ghost, you know, I should be a chattering idiot for the rest of my life!" Ingenions Maige (dreamily)—"Have you seen a ghost?"

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

——The state debating society will re-assemble in the Quaker City on the 16th of this month.

——A S. S. pic-nic will be held next Saturday on the Camp ground near W. F. Gray's.

——How is it possible for a father of a family to take such a filthy paper as the Watchman into his family for his children to read?

——Col. Jim Steven's train was discommoded for a few moments on last Saturday morning by a belligerent cow, but she will never do it again.

——The Annual election of trustees of the Pa. Agricultural Collage took place on last Wednesday. A large number of visitors were in attendance.

——Mr. Fin Shugert, a competent and graceful official in the Patent office department at Washington, D. C., is spending a few hollidays with his relations and friends in town.

——Go it strong when you advertice. Business is like architecture its best supporters are in columns, if we may be allowed to except those in the building adjoining the new bank.

——Major Jack McLellan has been visiting some of the large cities in search of machinery for the car shops. He has purchased the most improved machinery and will soon have things ready for making cars.

——The town council would endear itself to every burgher's heart, if it would see that its law in reference to keeping hogs off the streets were strictly enforced.—Watchman.

Now, Daniel O'Neil, do your duty, or off comes your scalp. The Watchman is after you.

——The Coleman Sisters gave a pleasant and interesting entertainment in this place on last Friday evening. The three little sisters are wonderful musical prodigies. They play on eight different instruments with an ease and correctness that is astonishing. They had a paying house.

——A friend of ours made us a present, yesterday, of a good sized book containing the compiled tables of the last censes. We have examined it carefully and find that it contains fully as much reading matter as can be found in twenty-five volumns of the ordinary sized novels for fifty cents apiece.

——Bellefonte is overrun with beautiful, fascinating, amiable and delicious young ladies, whose charms of mind and person have set our young men wild. They braid their hair into a beautiful bunch like a crown of glory on the very top of their heads and patronize this paper exclusively in their personal make-up.

——Our jail is so insecure, so totally unsafe that the local-option inmates are afraid to keep any jewelry about them for fear theives at large will break through and steal it. They have great respect for the ingenius Gahagan who built the hole in the wall. Our Commissioners ought to paint and whitewash it, or do something to make it impregnable.

——Col. Johnson, of New York, President of the Pa. & Western R. R., was here last Friday on business connected with the road. We saw him with Wm. J. Kealsh, Treasurer of the company, and Samuel A. Cook, one of the directors. Being desirous to push the rood rapidly to its completion, they are anxious to have all the stock subscribed and the first installment paid in.

——Miss Jennie Gehert has been called to the position of teacher in the Bellefonte Academy. She has just graduated with credit at the Female College of Steubenville, Ohio. Her addition to the already capable corps of teachers in the Academy is a well merited compliment both to Miss Gehert's ability as a teacher and Prof. Hughes' sagacity in securing the services of such a competent lady.

——The Lady who tapped her husband gently with her fan at a party the other night said "Love, it is growing late, I think we had better go home," is the same one who after getting home shook the rolling pin under his nose and said "you infernal old scoundrel you, if you ever look at that mean, nasty, calico faced, mackeral-eyed thing that you looked at to-night, I'll flatten your nose."

County Fair.—What are you going to take to the County Fair next month? is the question that should be asked in every farm house in the county. The executive committee seems to be doing its work well, but of course they can't make the Fair successful if the people of the county do not respond to their call. Let every farmer, mechanic, artisan, inventor and experimentalits bring the best fruits of his industry and skill to the County Fair. Bring in the large apples, mellow peaches, luscious grapes, mammoth pumpkins, let us have on exhibition bushels of the best corn, oats, wheat, rye and potatoes, every thing that the farm and garden produce; bring in the fine sheep, the fat cattle, the colts, the poultry and samples of all the live stock on the farm—not including the babies.

Bring along the agricultural impliments, the mowing and sowing machines, the bee scaps, rolls of sweet Centre County butter, samples of bread, jellies, tidies, quilts, fine needle work,—bring them all to the fair.

Let good committees be appointed and then let there be a strife for the premiums. Who shall have the honor of making the best bread or butter? Who will place on exibition the best wheat, or the finest cattle? Bring in the fleet footed horses and let us have interesting trials of speed. There is no more harm in testing the capacity of horses than there is in testing the strength of yokes of oxen, or skill in butter making or wheat growing,—no more harm than contesting for the cup in the college class or the strife that men wage for fame or fortune. Let the trials of speed be conducted properly with no pools or bets and none can take offense.

Let everybody arrange their business so as to be here on fair week, to take a few days from home duties, to confer with their neighbors as to their failures and successes in their particular pursuit. Let it be an agricultural institute as well as a "fair." Every effort should be made to have an interesting and profitable time. The premium list should be extended. There should be given a reward to the man who has worn the same pair of pants the longest time, to the man with the reddest, and woman with the longest hair, to the girl under 18 that makes the best bread, to the man who brings the most women and children to the fair, to the boy who exhibits the best trained colt, trained by himself, to the oldest lady, and ughest man, to the finest baby and the man with the longest nose, and so on. These perhaps would not be a great encouragement to agriculture, but they will add largely to the interest of the occasion, increase the number of persons in attendance and give more satisfaction than do the acts of back-pay congressmen.

If all citizens of our county will do their duties well and promptly our fair, this fall, will be the largest and most successful we have ever held.

——The Logan Fire Company gave their annual pic-nic on last Friday in Humes' grove near this place. In the morning the Logan boys, with Levi A. Miller in command, formed and marched to the hose-house of the Undine fire company where they were joined by a good delegation of the latter and the day's parade began. The Undine fire engine, drawn by four horses, the finely decorated hose carriages of both companies, the handsome uniforms, and soldierly bearing of the members, were all admired by crowds of citizens. After the parade the Logans, with a delegation of the Undines and many of our citizens, repaired to the beautiful grove to spend the day in pic-nicing. Dinner was served in fine style and the merry party spent the day and evening in dancing and other delightful amusements.

——And now the newspapers give the lists of teachers who are to furnish the next annual iustallments of learning to the rising generation. What a fine collection they would make if all the teachers of this state were gathered together! Would they compare favorably with the legal or medical fraternity? If they do not, why not? Pay higher salaries and the material that educates the youth of our state will be improved and renovated in proportion. Superior crops cannot be raised from bastard seeds nor can incompetent individuals be forced out of positions that nobody else will fill. Money buys incompetent officials into all offices but that of the school teacher, but it is seldom that a competent teacher receives an adequate salary.

——A Convention of the friends of the Temperance cause will be held in Milesburg, Pa., for the purpose of effecting organizations throughout the county, to enfore the laws of the land—on Friday, the 19th day of September, A. D., 1873. Call for the Convention given by the "Open Temperance Union" of Milesburg, Pa. Brethren in the cause, as the Convention of last January was a success, let the coming one be more than a success. Provisions will be made for all who come.

For the Republican.

Mr. Editor.—W. W. Brown blows lustily in the last number of the "Commissioners Organ" on account of having been elected to represent the South Ward of our Borough in the late Republican County Convention. This is a little rough on us but as ours was the only Ward in the Borough that gave a majority for him last spring, the selection cannot be said to be entirely out of keeping. But notwithstanding this circumstance we might have raised a very formidable oppostion and possibly have warded off this additional disgrace had it not been for the fact that he was the only candidate for delegate and there was no opposition of any account.

South Ward.

——We were asked, last Sunday, by some sabbath-school scholars who had been studying about the twelve apostles, if we would tell them who Peter's wife was? Her name and history did not occur to us just at that moment, and we concluded to wait until some time during the week. We have changed our mind, and don't think it proper to meddle with Peter's private affairs at all.—Upon any subject of a public nature we never refuse to throw the desired light; but this is altogether a different thing. It is a family matter with which we do not care to meddle. Peter died before many of us were born, and such idle curiosity regarding the family of a deceased person, we regard as reprehensible and calculated to violate the sanctities of domestic life. For these reasons, and because we do not wish to injure the feelings of the relatives of the deceased, we decline to answer the question.

——A great excitement prevailed on Allegheny street on last Thursday afternoon. It was very warm. Store-keepers were dozing in the cool corners, not expecting customers. The bankers were trying coolly to settle the cash. Everything seemed overcome with the heat.—Suddenly there was a commotion in the street, store-keepers rushed to the scene of the excitement, windows were thrown up and drowsy heads were pushed out, and the inquiry "what's the matter?" was asked over and over again. Dogs commenced to bark; the news spread to Bishop street, and then the pavement of that locality echoed to the tramp of scores of men, women and children.—Down from the jail district, up High street and Allegheny they poured, all anxiously asking the cause of the alarm. All crowded up to the centre of attraction, anxious eyes and strained necks were directed to a man in the middle of the throng, with his coat and hat off, his hair flying in the wind, and holding something desperately in his hands. A dozen dogs snapped and snarled—then there was a lull, a moment of anxious silence and then an involun ary shout went up, a passage was cleared, the dogs gave tongue, and the cause of the intense excitement was explained—John Cook had liberated from a trap a—rat.

——An old lady from Baltimore, with seven unmarried daughters, was hereabouts this summer, hunting for the Patrons of Husbandry. She meant business.

——The Car Shops are being pushed rapidly toward completion. The large, finely located spot of ground west of the Willow bank property has undergone a wonderful change. Careful draining has made it dry and solid while the handsome, solid looking buildings that are almost completed, give the place the appearance of a little village per se. The main building, known as the erecting shop is finished all but the roof. Near by stands the wood-machine shop; the builders have completed this building fully and it is now ready for placing the machinery. The iron-machine shop is ready for the rafters and will be finished in a week or ten days. The foundry and smith shops is well under way. So is the office, which when completed will be a model in its way. This building will be of brick, two stories in height with four rooms on the first story and two in the second. The rooms on the first floor will be used respectively as the Superintendent's office the Secretary and Treasurer's room, the book-keeper's room and the directors, office. Mr. Jack McClellan, the superintendent, has just returned from purchasing part of the large amount of machinery that will be required in the different shops. The wood machine shop will be furnished from the large wood ware machinery establishment of J. Fay & Co. of Cincinnati. The machinery for the smith shop costs over $4,000 and was purchased from the firm of Lewis, Oliver & Philips, of Pittsburgh The bolt-head machine alone cost $2,200. Supt. McClellan is now on a visit to the eastern cities for the purpose of buying machinery for the iron-machine shop. Adjoining the latter building is a mammoth turbine water-wheel of the Houston patent. It is 130 horse power, and was furnished by W. P. Duncan, the manufacturer. This wheel will furnish the motive power for the machinery in the department. A large bell, weighing 350 pounds, calls the employees to "labor, to refreshment" and vice versa. It is expected that the one hundred men now engaged on these buildings will have them completed, the machinery placed, and the work all in full operation by the last of November. Before that time the management will have erected tenement houses sufficient to accommodate the employees. Supt. McClellan has displayed a remarkable degree of ability and energy in pushing forward the work and in the detail management. John Strike, the general foreman, is an almost invaluable auxiliary. W. W. Curtin, the systematic and careful secretary, is an excellent man for that important office. Supt. Wilkins of the B. E. V. R. R. was here on Monday and surveyed the line for a railroad to the shops.

——John Irwin, Jr., is a man who has studiously avoided politics all his life. Having devoted himself to business pursuits all his lifetime, by his clear judgment, thorough integrity and industry, his devotion to the interests of the county the church and the state, he has been successful in that he has acquired a competency and has won the respect and esteem of all who know him. His honesty of purpose, his keen perceptions and simplicity of manner, are traits in his character that have made him respected and admired by all. He will undoubtedly carry, besides the full strength of his own party, many votes from those who have seen fit to differ from him in political sentiments. That he will be elected as our next state Senator is hardly without a doubt.

——At a late meeting of the Modoc Literary Society W. F. Reber took the office of Captain Jack, Bogus (Charley Cook) was made Vice-President. Steamboat Frank (Robt. McClellan) Recorder and Stack-nasty Jim (O. L. Meek) treasury. The council appointed N. Beck grand calumet loader, Dist. Attor. Potter, grand Scalp-holder and J. M. Kichline grand fog-horn blower, after which the council was formed, the camp fires lighted and Bogus Charley opened the debate on the question "Resolved that a Modoc will live longer without any squaws," all the rest of the tribe made speeches after which the calumet was passed around and the council ended.

——The Democratic Senatorial conference of this district are having a serious time as to who shall be their nominee for Senator. They have had over 200 ballots and are no nearer a nomination than they were at the first meeting Each candidate sticks as though a nomination was equal to an election. You need not trouble yourselves gentlemen who you nominate, for the people of this district will reject any man you put in nomination, whether it be Meek, Crawford, Petrikan or Warem, spend no more time or money, but nominate whom you please. The people of this district will have a conference on the 14th of October, and John Irwin, Jr., will be the selection.

Pumpkin notice.—On our office window rests a fine, large, golden hued pumpkin. It is a beauty and there is no telling how many dozens of pumpkin-pies will be made of it. Our friend Peter Shultz was the grower of this vegetable and the kind donor. May he live long te raise big pumpkins on his fruitful farm and enjoy eating pumpkin pies as long as he remembers the editors.

Tyrone, Sept. 4, 1873.

Messrs. Editors:—The Democratic conference of your district met here today, being the second meeting to nominate a candidate to run for State Senator. I notice that Centre has rather a pie-bald delegation—Billy Furey and C. T. Alexander of the "Commissioners' organ," and C. D. Keller and Jno. Wagner of the Meek wing. They were indeed a pie-bald looking delegation. A formal meeting was held yesterday afternoon, but it was dry business counting up the trios for each of the several counties, that after a few dozen of innings they adjourned to the "Emtraught" for the purpose of investigating the patent method of evading the local option law. It was rather refreshing to hear each candidate speak of his own popularity at home, and the converse in case of each of the others.

The conference again convened, with Orvis as a substitute for C. T. Alexander.

Crawford is learning that the duties of a politician disturbs his rest more than the practice of medicine. Warem is the coolest candidate in the batch, and if he were to have Senatorial honors thrust upon him, would Ware 'em with dignity. It was thought that the difficulty between Petriken and Crawford might be bridged, but there is no telling. Petriken is as oily and sleek as ever, and we would suppose from his own conversation that he was the ladies' pride of Huntingdon county, and fearfully popular among the men.

Next comes the wily Meek, who seemed a stranger in a strange land. He don't manipulate well here. A Lytle-Chambers-letter would do no good here. Blackguarding has no effect, and of course he is out of material.

By the time I had interviewed the contestants, the 205th ballot had been taken, and the conference adjourned to meet in Huntingdon, on Wednesday next, (to-day.) This move rubs Meek's name out of the slate, and the result is that Hon. John Irwin, Jr., will be our next State Senator.

For the Republican.

——The little town of Milesburg is pleasantly situated at the confluence of Spring creek with the Bald Eagle. The town is one hundred and five years old and for natural advantages has no equal in the county. The spirit of enterprise is being manifest by some of the energetic citizens of the place. J. B. Hahn Esq., one of the wideawake business men of the town, has taken charge of and enlarged the Axe Factory and is doing a thriving business, having the capacity for manufacturing from ten to fifteen doz. finished axes per day. The work is of the finest finish and quality and will compare favorably with any manufactory of the same kind in the state. Their workman are skilled in their profession and their work can be relied on. For beauty, neatness and utility they have no equal.

The firm of R. B. Kinnie & Bro. engaged in the coach manufactory is doing a fine business. The Messrs Kinnie are young intelligent and enterprising Americans. In visiting their establishment one is astonded, the beauty neatness and style of their work has no equal even in eastern cities. Among the most attractive articles is a side spring buggy of Old's patent wheels which for neatness, etc., has no equal in this country. The Messrs Kinnie are determined to convince the people of the interior of the state, that fine and durable work can be done out-side the eastern manufactories and challenge competition. They are worthy young men and desire the patronage of all who may want any thing in their line.

Mr. H. Levi has the building up for the horse shoe factory. By the energy of Mr. L—, the work will soon be completed and one of Mr. D. I. Pruner's wonderful machines will be in operation making from six to ten shoes per minute. Enterprise is waking up, and we trust the time is not far distant when the hum of industry and manufacture will resound throughout the entire town.

The Pope has issued an allocution addressed to the Roman Catholic Bishops in America, which seems to be chiefly aimed at secret orders, and especially the Free Masons. These are denounced as hostile to the spirit of the Church, and the excuse that in this country that these orders are purely charitable is denied. The Pope considers them fully as dangerous here as anywhere, though in what practical was is not specified. The Catholic clergy in this Republic can scarcely be held as derelict in the matter, for they have never ceased to labor to prevent the members of their flocks from belonging to these orders. Most persons of all faiths in America have long since been satisfied of the utter harmlessness of these orders, and hence their amazing popularity all over the county.

The Democratic city of Brooklyn has to endure a great robbery of its treasury this city has always been under Democratic control and the wholesale peculations indulged in by the Democratic politicians in connection with a similar robbery of the treasury of Fairfield Co., Ohio by Democratic officials. This shows the imperative necessity of putting the treasuries of the state and nation under Democratic control.

—It is a favorite argument of the whisky sellers and their friends, that more liquor is drank now than under the license law. If they believe what they say in in this respect, why are they so anxious to have the law repealed? While local option does not prevent the sale and use of intoxicating drinks, it has greatly curtailed the traffic.
